

Eric and Amy

Dear Birthmother,

We are writing this letter to tell you a little bit about who we are, our family structure, and our desire to bring another child into our family. Our names are Eric and Amy. We are the proud parents of 9 yr old Cole and 3yr old Evan.

Eric and I met in 2002 while he was completing his residency and I was studying to become an x-ray technician. At the time I was a single parent to 3 yr old Cole. Eric and Cole immediately bonded and I began to recognize this bond as true love between a future father and his son. After we married in 2005 Eric adopted Cole.

Our son Cole is a very bright 3rd-grader. He enjoys Cub scouts and playing with his friends. Evan loves trains, trucks and playing ball. He admires Cole and likes to try to do everything his big brother does. We have been talking with them both about bringing another child into our family and they are as excited about it as we are.

While pregnant with Evan, we discovered that there was a reaction occurring between my immune system and Evan's blood type that made the pregnancy high risk. After weekly visits to the high risk OB physician during the pregnancy and several weeks in the NICU after his birth Evan is happy and healthy. We feel that our family is not yet complete and we would love to have another child. However, we also feel that it would be irresponsible to attempt to bring another child into the world when we know going into it, that there could be serious risks to the baby's health.

Eric is an emergency physician and has a great schedule. His schedule allows for frequent stretches of days off. This allows us to spend a lot of time together as a family. I am very fortunate to be a stay at home mom. In our spare time, we love to read, workout, and travel. We are both active- Eric plays tennis and golf, and I enjoy running and even participated in my first marathon last year.

Every year in February we take a trip, usually to Mexico with Eric's parents. Then in the summer, we take a trip with our friends and their kids, to the beach in Michigan. When Eric is not working, we go to the zoo in our town and we love to walk to a great park that is close to our home. Our neighborhood is in a cul-de-sac and is filled with other children. Both sets of grandparents are very involved in our lives. They come and visit every chance they get and we have a full house on holidays.

We want to thank you for taking the time to look at our profile. We realize that this is a difficult choice, and we admire your decision to search for a loving family for your child.

Sincerely,
Eric and Amy
